I have a table that stores logs of a system. I am using a text file to feed each line into the table. Since the table will be large, I want to avoid reading each row and then update a record if that row is updated. I'd rather have a quick way to check if a record was updated, and only update the original record or create a new record, if that's the case. The table is called logs and it has columns: field_id, field_value, field_timestamp All I need is to be able to check if the field_value in the field_timestamp is not the same as the last value in the text file. If it's not equal, then insert. A: You can get the new value in a UPDATE, using a JOIN to find the last record. This assumes that the text file is sorted newest first (which should be true for a log file): UPDATE logs SET field_value = last_value.field_value WHERE field_timestamp > last_timestamp.field_timestamp; If it's not sorted, the JOIN becomes more complicated. Edit Note also that INSERT... ON DUPLICATE KEY UPDATE has some advantages over a straight-forward UPDATE, including: guaranteed success automatically executes if an update would have been applied, but was already applied for some other reason Doesn't require the server to be online This is a common mechanism, so it's good to know about it. This week in film, the X-Men opened up a new chapter in the franchise, Ghost Rider caught lightning in a bottle, Mastermind's track on Superman and more. Plus we take a look at Lifetime's new movie Death Race, which looks as good as the trailer makes it seem, and the film has a very similar plot to The Post. You can find the show notes for this week's episode below, but you can get even more great content by subscribing to the show on iTunes or on Stitcher or by searching for it on Google Play. Links: Captain Marvel was a massive hit at the box office this weekend with over $400 million worldwide (see our review), and we're now looking ahead to the release of Infinity War in 2018. If you haven't read our spoiler-free review, it's worth a read: Captain Marvel on Infinity War Spoilers. Talking of, Catching Fire delivered $422 million world-wide and has surpassed Avatar's gross, becoming the fifth-highest-grossing film of all time. Speaking of The Hunger Games series, District 13 is back at it with a sequel, Mockingjay Part 2, which debuts November 20 in the US. Dwayne Johnson is heading to the big screen in a hilarious new comedy, Central Intelligence. Director Jon Watts spoke about the new chapter in the Marvel Cinematic Universe and how it changes the game for the future. Mary was a great one, she's one of the best in comics, she brings the energy. She brings the humor, she brings the pain, she brings the heart. Everyone says, Mary is going to be a huge part of the MCU, but she already is, in real life. Katie touched on the Ghost Rider movie, and how the changes in the comics were born from their own creative processes: So the thing with Ghost Rider and Johnny Blaze was that I was working on the script and I was like,
