The influence of decreased vapor pressure of the environment on the plasma concentration of mivacurium was investigated in 12 unpremedicated patients, anaesthetised with nitrous oxide in oxygen, following a single i.v. dose of 1.25 mg mivacurium/kg body weight, or, after a 2-week period, an adapted maintenance dose of 0.2 mg mivacurium/kg/h. Anesthesia was maintained by intermittent doses of the mivacurium. After the 2-week period, an average plasma concentration of 5.13 micrograms/ml (95% confidence limits 4.26-5.99 micrograms/ml) was found. At day 1, 3 and 5 after the 1-week period, however, a mean concentration of mivacurium of 1.89, 1.83 and 1.88 micrograms/ml, respectively, was measured. In the same period the mean elimination half-life of mivacurium was 5.4 h. After the 2-week adaptation period the mean plasma concentration of mivacurium was 4.18 micrograms/ml. The mean elimination half-life increased to 18.0 h at day 1, to 18.2 h at day bff6bb2d33

Myrrh brings depth to the flavors, and the powdered red pepper is common in African ostrich porridge in Kenya. It's also used in ostrich meat porridge in Malawi. The other herbs in this recipe are a combination African herbs and European herbs and spices. Step 1: Choosing Ostrich Meat Ostrich meat is a tough muscle. It can take a long time to make into a porridge, so it's important to choose ostrich meat that's already cooked. Porgy and porgy meat has become a well-known supermarket food that's safe to eat and sell, but if you can't find it, buy ostrich meat from a butcher who expects you to cook it.
