An attacker can use this issue to create a temporary 64-bit server image that can be uploaded to the target. I have a 32 bit and 64 bit processor (Windows 2008 64 Bit). Running XE5 and XE6. I have a program that has a 64 bit component. Update - The solution that worked for me was to run the upgrade tool (File->Upgrade...) in Windows Explorer. The firewall had it blocked. The error message was in the format mentioned on your list. Needless to say, I did a full rebuild of my RAD Studio development environment and am now running XE6 Professional 2019. Update 6/16/2020: I upgraded to RAD Studio 2019 on a Win10 machine. When I installed a new "update" via File>Updates, it installed 64-bit version of XE6 instead of 32-bit. I then manually installed the 32-bit version (default) as there was no 64-bit version listed in the "Updates" tab in the main menu. I now have the 32 and 64-bit versions of XE6 installed.
