U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), Homeland Security Investigations (HSI) and the White Collar Crime Division of the IRS-CI executed a search warrant on Sevilla's place of business, a U-Haul rental facility. In addition to finding the business records of various recipients and senders of bitcoins, United States postal inspectors found substantial evidence of tax fraud involving the victim from December of 2014 through March of 2016, who was identified in documents as "Sevilla." Sevilla, 39, was allegedly utilizing non-working email addresses and prepaid debit cards to sell about 1.3 million dollars worth of bitcoins through online platforms. Court records show that Sevilla rented and sold numerous vehicles, including a 2012 Mercedes Benz G550, 2009 Toyota Tacoma and various vans, and two different residential properties within the St. Louis area. "Bitcoin, as a digital currency, has a special aspect to it because it is completely anonymous and untraceable," special agent Storment explained. "This has allowed all illegal activity to be conducted with relative impunity." As a result, organizations such as the FBI are growing increasingly interested in cryptocurrencies and the companies that own them, particularly since the ability to transfer these funds is now relatively anonymous. In Sevilla's case, court records show that he transferred about $1.2 million worth of bitcoins between two different bitcoin exchanges, and used the money to purchase more than $3.6 million worth of luxury items including credit cards, diamonds and jewelry. The transaction records indicate that Sevilla was targeting individuals in the northeastern United States. Court documents also show that Sevilla sent employees at U-Haul, a rental agency in

Password Protection and safe sendingQ: Minimum period to hold cookies in server side code I have seen a lot of questions about cookies in ASP.NET, most of which are either a red herring or pretty much copy/paste webforms legacy code. I will give a relatively short example that is, in a word, incorrect. Cookies.Set("Test", "Who?", "Form", true); string test = Cookies.Values["Test"].ToString(); You will see that test contains a value which is a carriage return followed by a new line. This has the effect of having two cookies on the page, each with separate values. To solve this, you can simply force a single cookie to set, adding a new cookie: var cookie = HttpContext.Current.Request.Cookies[".MyCookie"]; cookie.Value = value; HttpContext.Current.Request.Cookies.Add(".MyCookie", value); Which, like the first line, will remove the prior value. So, this is, however, not the answer. If the above is run within a request, it will only change the active cookie. If it is run on the server, it will cause an error, because it can't resolve the value of Test, because it will have no cookies at that point in time. What is the minimum period to keep a cookie in memory for? What is the shortest period? If there is an answer, let me know, but I haven't found an answer elsewhere. A: The minimum period between requests to server is 5 minutes. If you access the site after the cookies expires you will receive a new cookie. Q: How to enter ssh hostname into a variable in Bash I have a script that I am working on and one of the steps of the script requires that I enter the hostname of a server into a variable. I have the following example: #!/bin/sh SERVER_HOSTNAME="HOST_NAME" eval $SERVER_HOSTNAME What I

It has many other interesting features that we'll get to know as we progress through the guide, but know that SecuSend offers a good start to the day. What are you waiting for? We live in a digital world in which information is being shared at an unprecedented rate. We might be more concerned with what is being said than with what we say. But nowadays, there are plenty of people out there who would love to see you suffer. So how does it happen? What is online reputation? Today there are many users out there who try to collect information that may prove your life to be threatened if it gets out. Facebook knows enough to block any links that might get your page in trouble, but there's no way to prevent your friends or people you know from spreading the bad news. So, what if you're not on Facebook? You can keep your information secret by: * Using a virtual private network to hide your IP (Internet protocol) address, which is a numerical code that identifies you on the Internet; * Using Tor, the free browser that makes your IP address disappear; * Using a VPN (virtual private network) that requires a monthly fee. It's best to use multiple methods to keep your information as safe as possible. What is online reputation? It is an avatar that represents who you are online. It is created by your online presence, including search results, comments, recommendations, endorsements, opinions, reviews and ratings. It can be used to save the reputation of a certain product, place or service. There are two main things you need to do to remove bad reviews of your brand or your products or services. Not enough It's best to remove bad reviews when they have the potential to destroy your business. Regardless of whether
