A semiconductor device having a capacitor element has been proposed in the art as shown in FIG. 19, which illustrates, as a typical example, a semiconductor device including a trench-type capacitor. More specifically, the conventional semiconductor device shown in FIG. 19 includes a substrate 101, a trench (damascene trench) 105 formed in the substrate 101, and a capacitor element 100 embedded in the trench 105. The semiconductor device also includes an isolation film 103 embedded in the substrate 101 and an interconnection layer 102 which are formed so as to fill the trench 105. The capacitor element 100 is composed of a lower electrode 102 formed in the trench 105, a capacitor dielectric layer 103
