Despite recent advances in treatment, cancer still remains a major cause of morbidity and mortality. Since the discovery of the tumor suppressor p53 in 1979, the key role of this molecule in cancer and the tumor susceptibility has been recognized, the understanding of which, combined with knowledge of tumor cell biology, has paved the way for new approaches to cancer treatment. Hence, the development of active antitumor molecules which do not induce damage to normal tissues is an ongoing effort, and this has led to the search for compounds that interact selectively with cancer cells. beta-glucans can be considered as a group of large molecules which are ubiquitous in nature. Among their different biological activities,
