When police officers try to break up a fight, they often end up having to respond to the scene in full equipment, which can be heavy and cumbersome. So two officers in North Carolina have come up with a creative way to make police work that much easier, making officers' uniforms lighter and more comfortable. The idea behind the "Smart Uniform" is that the shirts and pants are stitched into one piece, which can be changed to reflect the work they do. The only problem is that the new in-your-face style of policing is not always popular with everyone. The pair, David Peel and Thomas Brown, from the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department, are still experimenting with whether the shirt and pants can be swapped out for other colors, but they say it could eventually become a selling point for law enforcement. If all goes well, they hope to start selling the "Smart Uniform" to other departments later this year, according to the police department's website.

Q: Eigenvalues of a 3d tensor. How to find the eigenvalues of $\left(\begin{array}{ccc} a & b & c \\ 0 & d & e \\ 0 & 0 & f \end{array} \right)$ I tried using $\det(T - \lambda I)$ and got $d(\lambda - \frac{ae+bc+af}{\lambda})$, but couldn't solve further.

A: Write $A = \begin{pmatrix} a & b & c \\ 0 & d & e \\ 0 & 0 & f \end{pmatrix}$ and consider the matrix $B = \begin{pmatrix} d & -b & -c \\ e & -a & -b \\ f & -a & -d \end{pmatrix}$ (the matrix B is of course symmetric.) For any symmetric matrix A you can construct its eigenvalues in the following way (apply the characteristic polynomial to the symmetric matrix B): $\det \begin{pmatrix} \lambda & -b & -c \\ -e & \lambda & -b \\ -f & -a & \lambda \end{pmatrix}$

I'd Rather Learn Tcl If I Wanted To Be Techie I'm finishing up my Master's in Computer Science, and my project is very, very involved with processing medical data. I'm already familiar with Java and I've recently started reading through that book. I am looking at starting out a career in bi-pharmaceutics -- basically, I would be working for a pharmaceutical company, helping to refine and set up new drug delivery mechanisms. I don't really want to go into how I work, but the main idea would be to help create new technology to help make the industry more transparent. There are a few other ideas that I could work on, but I think this would be the most interesting. I'm also a big fan of the work of Theo de Raadt, and he made a lot of interesting points in that video. But my question is: should I really be learning Scala and getting my CS degree? I'd be much better off if I spent my time working on my project and learning Tcl. I need to be learning something that will help me with my immediate work, and it seems like Scala would be too far away from that. Personally, I think you should be learning Tcl and working on your project. You should not worry about learning Scala. You can learn Scala if you like, but it is NOT the right choice for you. I learned how to do a lot of development in Tcl, and it seemed 1cdb36666d
