Windows Vista Caller-ID Full Crack is a telephone service built for private and small business customers. This app links with Windows Media Center and Outlook, and notifies users via a small pop-up window on their PC every time they receive a telephone call. Modem Internet connection is a must Vista Caller-ID supports Windows Vista and XP operating systems, and uses Windows Home Server Add-in, Media Center, and Outlook to link data and contact information with your caller. Users must be connected to a telephone landline via modem so the app can receive incoming calls. Lines and telephone connections will be displayed in the list under 'Phone and Modem' in the main menu. Contact customization options Vista Caller ID allows users to synchronize telephone contacts list with Outlook contact database. This is done by linking telephone contact numbers with respective e-mails or additional information they introduced in Outlook. Contact pictures will also be imported from Outlook, and they will appear in the small pop-up window when a synchronized contact will attempt to call you. Windows Home Server sharing mode In case you need to archive and later share all your telephone contacts, Vista Caller ID can automatically send all your contact information to your remote Home Server. This way, if your computer gets viruses or you happen to lose all your contacts in Outlook or computer, you can always feel safe that your Home Server will have your contact lists safe and sound. Configuration settings Contact caller windows have a few customization options, like what sort of color tints pop-up windows will have, and their intensity, size, and transparency. Additionally, pop-effects can be changed in case the default one does not fit your preferences. Conclusion Vista Caller-ID can satisfy users that are still connected to the Internet via modems or a telephone landline. Although limited in interface customization options, it has the ability to synchronize your Outlook contacts info with your telephone caller's pop-up window, this way giving you more direct information about who is calling you than just a simple number. A: At the very least in addition to the suggestions given I would suggest that you add to that the ability to close the calls without having to change the settings of your phone, or having to switch to your other phone if it's on the same line. Also, ideally, the computer would update the caller ID on the other phone when you get a call from someone in the other device without you needing to switch to it. A: After a little research, I came across the following (prices and availability): Now, you still need a modem, but this is a pretty viable solution for businessbased companies, esp. if you have a lot of phones connected to a wireless network.
