The full-Â .When one thinks of Chicago, the image that comes to mind isn't exactly the feel-good, family-friendly city it's been labeled as. Even the suburbs have a reputation for being cold and rough. Well, that's changing for the better as the city's citizens are growing more compassionate and welcoming towards each other. This huge wave of empathy isn't a trend. Chicago has a long history as a capital of compassion. It all started with William Gladden, a preacher who founded the Chicago Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in 1874. The origins of this humane movement began in New York where Bill Gladden's mentor, Jacob Riis, wrote the book How the Other Half Lives. Riis' book described the miseries of poverty, crime and disease in the city. Gladden became so involved in the fight for social justice, animal welfare and poverty relief that he decided to focus his time on the streets instead of the pulpit. This led him to found the Chicago Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Soon enough he was joined by famous names such as Jane Addams and Henry Bergh, who founded the American Humane Association. When other cities in the north caught on, Chicago was the first
