Testosterone is the primary androgen produced by the testes and is considered to be the most potent androgen, with a pivotal role in development, maintenance, and reproduction of the male. This study aimed at investigating the effects of castration on total serum testosterone levels in two cat breeds, using a cut-off value of ≤ 0.04 ng/mL, based on the data obtained in previous studies. Testosterone values of kittens without testes (group A, n=58) were ≤ 0.04 ng/mL in 23 animals (40.3%) and >0.04 ng/mL in the other 35. In cats with a total serum testosterone (TST) level ≤ 0.04 ng/mL (
